Greetings:

It has been awesome to be back in school and associating with kids and staff face to face. I am encouraged by the excitement everyone has shown to be back into the routine of school. I also appreciate the patience and effort of staff, students, and parents as we have prepared for a “different” year and made the adjustments necessary to hold school with the current pandemic.

#BeeBetter

As we look to continue the school year, and have evaluated the start of school, there are two areas I’d like to focus on this month.

First: Social Media

With everything going on in the world today, more of us are turning to social media as a source of information, strength, or support. Unfortunately, some choose to use social media as a means to tear others down and distribute messages of hate and discontent. As a Bonneville Bee Family, social media is an arena in which we can take control in our lives by not engaging with those who would create content to tear others down and distribute hate. If these types of people have zero followers and are ignored, they will move on, but the more we engage in their agenda, the more they are empowered to affect our lives negatively. If you find yourself being negatively affected by social media, disconnect from it and seek out those people who build you up—parents and good friends. If you find yourself distributing messages of hate and discontent, now is the time to make a change in your life and #BeeBetter.

Second: Masks

While we have been pleasantly surprised by the compliance of our staff and students in masking up during school hours, one area of concern is participation in the mask mandate at extracurricular activities. Students, staff, teams, and patrons have been less engaged in keeping one another safe outside of the school day. I know our student council is trying to organize homecoming and other activities for our community and student body; however, all of these activities will include the necessity to mask up. Each of us has a legal and moral responsibility to follow the masking mandate and the articulation of these activities will be dependent on individuals supporting the community effort to stop the spread of COVID. During events in the next few weeks is a great opportunity for us to show that we can follow the protocols and direction we have been given and that prove that we can be entrusted to include additional activities because we are working to keep one another safe. Let’s start today by masking up, both at school and extracurricular activities and #BeeBetter so we can enjoy Homecoming and other events together.

Important Dates/Information:

We will start with our new Monday schedule next week. This is a great time for students to get some additional support. IF you have an I on your transcript from 3rd trimester last year, Monday is a GREAT time for you to work with those teachers to restore your incomplete.
